13. Action by designated officer

Subject to section 25(3) of the Human Tissue and Transplant Act 1982, a designated officer shall not authorise the carrying out of any non-coronial post-mortem examination unless he or she has been provided with a completed approved consent form (which includes the certification from the post-mortem co-ordinator referred to in clause 12(c) of the Code).

“the repealed Code” means the Non-Coronial Post-Mortem Examinations Code of Practice 2007.

20. Copies of reports to be provided to Chief Health Officer

The Chief Medical Officer shall provide copies of any reports received in accordance with clause 19 of the Code to the Chief Health Officer on or before the 1st day of September in the year in which the reports are received, together with any comments which the Chief Medical Officer considers should be made on those reports and on the operation and effectiveness of the Code generally.

21. Repeal

The Non-Coronial Post-Mortem Examinations Code of Practice 2007 is repealed.

Dr ANDREW ROBERTSON, Chief Health Officer.

SCHEDULE 1

The following Principles are based on “The National Code of Ethical Autopsy Practice” which is a national code of practice endorsed by Health Ministers in April 2002 as reflecting “best practice” in post-mortem examinations.

PRINCIPLES

The following principles underpin the Code and govern for the conduct of non- coronial post-mortems—

- It should be clear to families that a non-coronial post-mortem can only be carried out in accordance with the requirements set out in the Human Tissue and Transplant Act 1982 and the Code.
- Respect must be shown towards the deceased and their families at all times.
- Full, open and attentive communication is fundamental to effectively involving families.
- Processes must be transparent and accountable and able to be assessed and reported.
- The public benefit of post-mortems needs to be recognised.

In addition, post-mortem practice must be governed by the following principles—

- The family must be consulted and given the opportunity to be involved to whatever extent they wish to be.
- The wishes of the deceased and the family in regard to the post-mortem examination should be accommodated as far as possible.
- Information must be provided in a timely, understandable and sensitive fashion and answers to questions must be open and honest.
- Only appropriately trained persons (post-mortem co-ordinators) should provide information to families.
- Family members must be consulted and their agreement obtained about organ retention and disposal, (in person wherever possible) unless they have made it clear they do not want to be consulted.
- Appropriate bereavement support should be provided to families in acknowledgment of their loss.
- An appropriately qualified and authorised person should take responsibility for the performance of each and every post-mortem.
- There must be a clear delineation between the uses to which retained tissues/organs can be put such as diagnosis, research or education.
- All research using organs or tissues derived from post-mortems must have the approval of a properly constituted ethics committee.

GUIDELINES

The following Guidelines are based on “The National Code of Ethical Autopsy Practice” which is a national code of practice endorsed by Health Ministers in April 2002 as reflecting “best practice” in post-mortem examinations.

(i) BEST PRACTICE GUIDELINES FOR INFORMING AND INVOLVING FAMILIES

Traditionally professionals have sought to protect families from information that they may find distressing. However, experience has shown that timely information provided in a sensitive manner can empower families and is far less distressing than later disclosure.

Bereaved families have the right to clear, factual and sensitive communication from a skilled professional. Institutions have a responsibility to ensure that in each case there is a specifically trained staff member (the post-mortem co-ordinator) whose role is to engage with the bereaved family and provide clear, factual information in a sensitive manner following the death of a patient.

The approach to the family regarding post-mortem is most appropriately made by the senior clinician treating the patient. This is not a duty to be delegated to a junior medical officer or untrained interviewing officer. Requesting a post-mortem and discussing organ retention and use and other sensitive information should be conducted face to face wherever possible. Whilst an approach by telephone may be allowable and in some cases unavoidable, it is not ideal.

The appropriately trained person whose priority is the needs of the bereaved family should support the clinician in this role.

The capabilities of such persons in providing assistance to the bereaved family should include—

- an understanding of the dynamics of the grief process,
- counselling and communication skills to convey information at a pace and using language the family are able to understand,
- the capacity to recognise the needs of families where English is not the first language (including Torres Strait Islander and Aboriginal families), and the potential for diminishing fluency and comprehension or reversion to original language,
- communication and advocacy skills to ensure the wishes of the family are conveyed and respected,
- a good understanding of the non-coronial post-mortem examination process and the legal and ethical issues related to agreement to that process,

- a good understanding of the post-mortem process relative to the need for tissue/organ retention and options available for future use, release or disposal of the retained tissue/organ,
- knowledge of all aspects of funeral arrangements.

Institutions involved with the bereaved family must recognise and provide for the following needs—

- a quiet, private area to undertake these discussions,
- time to assimilate the impact of the death before being approached to discuss post-mortem. Whilst it is acknowledged in certain situations the treating clinician may have had extensive discussions about the prognosis of the patient and the benefit of post-mortem may have already been raised with the family, in most situations it is inappropriate to raise the issue until the family has had time to take in the death of the patient,
- information about events leading to the death, treatment attempts etc before feeling ready to discuss other issues,
- support to facilitate their “goodbye” to their relative,
- any special religious or cultural rituals which must be acknowledged and met where possible,
- clear honest information,
- specifically families must be clearly informed of their rights—
 - to refuse the performance of a post-mortem,
 - to limit the extent of the examination and retention of tissue and organs, understanding that such limitations may compromise the information obtained from the post-mortem,
 - in regard to disposal options for retained tissues and organs,
 - to be advised about uses other than diagnosis to which retained tissues/organs can be put;
- access to interpreters and appropriate health workers where necessary,
- information and assistance to make funeral arrangements,
- assessment and referral for ongoing counselling if required,
- provision of post-mortem results in an understandable form. They may prefer to meet with the clinical team who cared for their relative or with their own GP. In some situations discussion with the pathologist may be appropriate.

(ii) GUIDELINES FOR POST-MORTEM REQUEST AND CONSENT FORMS

The request by practitioner

The form should include—

- name of medical practitioner requesting post-mortem,
- name of deceased,
- the family member consulted, by whom and their relationship to the deceased,
- clinical report and reason for seeking post-mortem,
- information on hazards presented to mortuary staff—infectious, radioactive etc,
- mode of request—in writing, in person or by telephone.

Every reasonable effort must be made to contact the next of kin, recognising different kinship arrangements in some cultures (eg. Aboriginal).

The role of the post-mortem co-ordinator is to check and sign that the documentation reflects compliance with the Human Tissue and Transplant Act 1982 and the Code.

The consent form

The approved consent form should be simple and refer to the approved information document, and include a statement that the approved information document has been read and understood, with a copy provided to the family. The approved consent form should also include—

- the name of the key person who discussed the issues with the family,
- the name of the person seeking the family’s authorisation,
- that there was adequate explanation of the reason for and process of post-mortem,
- options for both broad and conditional agreement. Both a general and specific agreement should be offered. Families should be offered the option to agree to a post-mortem without specifying conditions, but also to agree individually to research, teaching and return of organs. It is recognised that while many families want to be very informed and be provided with an opportunity to determine what organs are retained, what they can be used for and how they will be disposed of, not all families are comfortable considering these aspects,
- whether the deceased had previously agreed or objected to post-mortem,
- whether any other next of kin had previously objected to post-mortem,
- options for full or limited post-mortem, specifying limitations,
- options for retention of organs, specifying limitations,
- agreement that specimens will be retained—the need for indefinite retention of blocks and slides must be explained to the family,
- whether retained organs or tissues can be used for education,

- whether retained organs or tissues can be used for approved research consistent with the National Health and Medical Research Council National Statement on ethical conduct in research involving humans,
- options for disposal of retained organs including return to body, later return to funeral director nominated by the family or respectful disposal by the hospital,
- the date and time of planned funeral arrangements,
- name of doctor(s) to whom the post-mortem report should be provided.

(iii) GUIDELINES FOR WRITTEN MATERIAL PROVIDED TO FAMILIES

The information document

Families should be provided with a copy of the consent form that they have completed. Explanatory information (the approved information document) should be available to give to the family to supplement the discussions. The approved information document should include an explanation of the post-mortem including what retention of tissues and organs means. It may be necessary to include a glossary to explain samples, tissues, organs and other terms. This information should be provided in relevant languages if no member of the family is literate in English.

Information about non-coronial post-mortems should include the choices about—

- the rights to refuse permission for a post-mortem,
- the extent of the post-mortem,
- retention of organs,
- the limitations on the information available if they choose to limit the post-mortem,
- their right to choose whether retained samples can be used for other purposes such as research, education and quality control,
- who the post-mortem report is provided to,
- disposal of retained samples, eg. return to the body before release, subsequent release to funeral director or respectful disposal by the institution.

Families affected by non-coronial post-mortems may also benefit from information about—

- obtaining the death certificate,
- procedures for reporting complaints and concerns,
- sources of further assistance including interpreters and counselling.
